Gusts

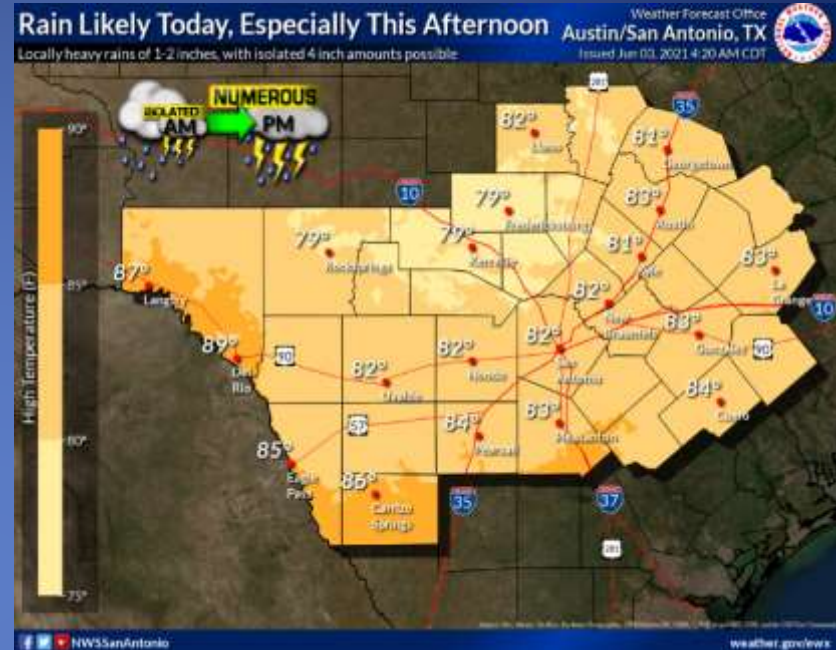

Hazardous Weather

Hazardous Weather

Should be a rather nice day in these parts. A few thunderstorms might manage to get going and there's an outside risk of a severe gust, but overall, much less coverage in terms of storminess than we have seen lately.

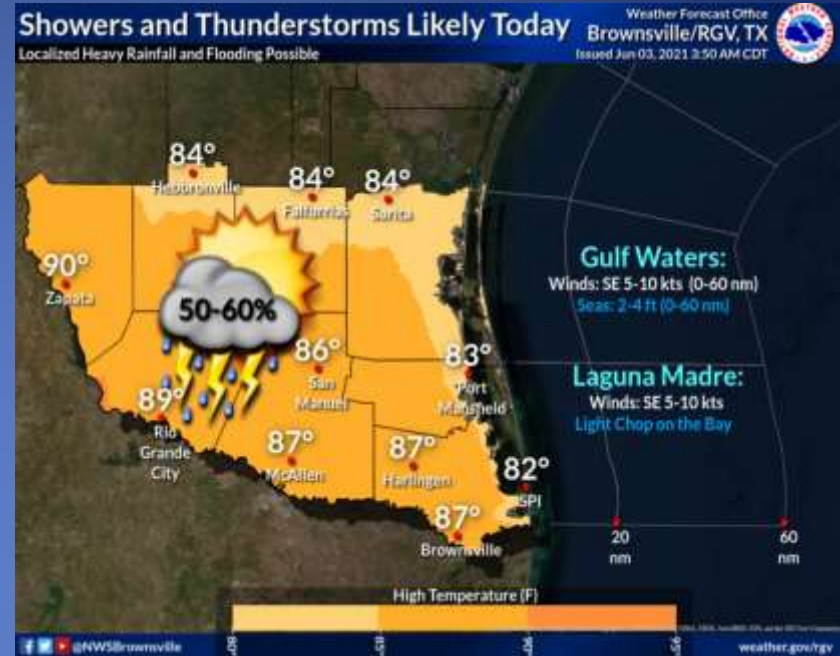

Rain chances escalate in the late morning with numerous thunderstorms forecast to develop by late this afternoon into the early evening. Locally heavy rainfall and isolated areas of flash flooding remain possible.

Hazardous Weather

Another round of showers and thunderstorms is expected across South Texas today mainly this afternoon as an upper-level disturbance approaches the area. A few storms could become strong at times, but the main threat will be possible localized flooding. Otherwise, expect party to mostly cloudy skies and light east to southeasterly winds, with highs in the mid to upper 80s.

Showers and thunderstorms are likely today as an upper level disturbance moves across Texas and interacts with preexisting convective boundaries. Some of these storms could produce locally heavy rainfall which increases the threat of flash flooding with the already saturated soils. Marine conditions will be favorable besides the showers and thunderstorms with low seas and light southeast winds.
